

CHNS 4800 Health and Food in Chinese Service-Learning Spring 2021

The students of this course participated in a wide range of service-learning activities this semester, benefitting various causes and using their Mandarin abilities for good.

Proofreading.

Students assisted staff of the Good Food Fund by proofreading research papers in English to support grammar, sentence structure, and delivery for distribution to a wider audience.

Translations.

Students put their Mandarin skills to the test by translating long-form research articles and essays from the Good Food Fund from Chinese to English for distribution to a wider audience.

Tutoring Students

Two students provided weekly tutoring support to students in Boston through Boston Chinatown Neighborhood Center (BCNC).

Teaching Professionals.

One student provided weekly English lessons to working professionals from the Good Food Fund to introduce networking, conference, and other professional terms and practice dialogue.

Organizing a Summit.

All students organized a summit through liaising with speakers, partners, audience members, and hosting breakout room dialogues surrounding key Food Systems issues in English and Chinese in collaboration with Good Food Fund and the United Nations. Watch the keynote address in the Virtual Expo!
